

Module 3

Service of Process on Military Personnel

TRAINING NOTES

THIS MODULE IN ITS ENTIRETY MAY NOT BE APPROPRIATE FOR ALL CASE WORKERS.

The complexity of some of the material (subsections 3.2.2.1, 3.2.2.2, and section 3.4.2) may be more appropriate for senior staff and/or attorneys. The trainer may delete those portions of the module that are not relevant or appropriate to the target audience.

What you need to say/do

1. Display PowerPoint Slide Module 3-1: Module 3 (title slide).
2. Ask participants if there are any lingering questions from earlier modules. When there are no further questions, proceed to Module 3.
3. Explain the goals and objectives of this module.

What you need to know

1. It takes approximately one hour and 15 minutes to complete this module.
2. Listed below are the equipment, handouts, and PowerPoint Slides needed for the module.

Equipment/Supplies:

- Personal computer with PowerPoint program
- LCD projector and screen
- Trainer Guide
- Participant Guides (including Appendix with Handouts)

PowerPoint Slides

- 3-1: Module 3 (title slide)
- 3-2: Types of Jurisdiction
- 3-3: Personal Jurisdiction over the Defendant Service Member
- 3-4: Obtaining Personal Jurisdiction over a Military Member
- 3-5: Long Arm Jurisdiction
- 3-6: Long Arm Jurisdiction (cont'd)
- 3-7: United States Installations
- 3-8: Voluntary Acceptance of Service
- 3-9: Overseas Methods of Service
- 3-10: Service on Board a Ship
- 3-11: Exercise Scenarios
- 3-12: Summary

Handouts:

- 3-1: Service Contacts for Assistance
- 3-2: Information on Service of Legal Documents Abroad
- 3-3: Review Exercises

MODULE 3: SERVICE OF PROCESS ON MILITARY PERSONNEL

Time: 1 hour, 15 minutes

3.1 SERVICE OF PROCESS ON MILITARY PERSONNEL

3.1.1 Learning Goal

Each participant will understand the methods and procedures for the service of civil process on military personnel located on United States military installations and ships in U.S. waters, and for U.S. military personnel overseas or on ships in non-U.S. waters.

3.1.2 Learning Objectives

- Given an interactive lecture, participants will demonstrate an understanding of how to serve process on military personnel stationed at military locations in the United States and what limitations may be encountered.
- Given an interactive lecture, participants will demonstrate an understanding of how to serve process on military members who are located at overseas installations or on ships in non-United States waters.
- Through a discussion of scenarios, participants will identify issues related to service of process on military personnel and propose solutions.

TRAINING NOTES

What you need to say/do

1. Display PowerPoint Slide 3-2: Types of Jurisdiction.
 2. Explain the difference between personal jurisdiction and in rem jurisdiction.

What you need to know

3.2 JURISDICTION OVER MILITARY PERSONNEL

3.2.1 Overview

The first step in establishing or enforcing a support obligation against a military member is location of the member. Assuming that location is not an issue, the next critical step is obtaining jurisdiction. Obtaining jurisdiction over military members is similar to obtaining jurisdiction over civilians. Military service, however, creates interesting issues.

First, let's discuss the basics of jurisdiction. Some legal actions, like paternity or support establishment, require personal jurisdiction over the military member. Other legal actions, like seizure of a bank account, require jurisdiction over the military member's property or asset. Common to both types of jurisdiction is the requirement that the person must receive notice of the proceeding. Notice is accomplished through service of process.

TRAINING NOTES

What you need to say/do

1. Display PowerPoint Slide 3-3: Personal Jurisdiction over the Defendant Service Member.
2. Display PowerPoint Slide 3-4: Obtaining Personal Jurisdiction over a Military Member.
3. Explain how a military member's domicile and residence may or may not be the same.
4. Field 44 of the leave and earnings statement (LES) will show a service member's legal domicile, but does not give the member's physical residence or location. See Handout 6-1 in the Appendix.

What you need to know

1. A military member retains legal residency in the state in which he or she entered military service, unless the member takes affirmative acts to change his or her legal residence/domicile. The main reason for a change in domicile is state income tax laws. The military leave and earnings statement (LES) notes the state of domicile or legal residency that the member claims in field 44.
2. For assistance in understanding the LES, visit the website of the Defense Finance and Accounting Service. There is a link explaining the LES for each service branch, as well as the Reserve/National Guard. See <http://www.dfas.mil/militarymembers.html>.

3.2.2 Personal Jurisdiction

Personal jurisdiction over the petitioner usually is not an issue; by bringing the legal action, the person is consenting to the tribunal's jurisdiction over him or her.

Personal jurisdiction over the defendant may be more problematic.

Personal jurisdiction can be based on a person's domicile, physical residence, an act within the state that gave rise to the cause of action, or "minimum contacts."

3.2.2.1 Domicile

A person's domicile is not always the same as his or her physical residence. This is especially true with the military. Domicile requires intent: A person is domiciled in a state if he intends to make that place his fixed home for legal purposes at least for the time. A military member generally keeps the domicile he or she had at the time he or she entered military service.

Field 44 of the military member's Leave and Earnings Statement (LES) will reflect that state as the member's domicile until the member actively changes it for state income tax purposes. (See Handout 6-1 in the Appendix.) Therefore, the LES will always reflect where a member claims domicile or legal residence for state income tax purposes. It is important to note, however, that the LES does not show the physical residence of the service member. Often a military member's domicile is one state, but his or her physical residence is another, or many others, over the member's entire military career.

TRAINING NOTES

What you need to say/do

1. Continue to display PowerPoint Slide 3-4: Obtaining Personal Jurisdiction over a Military Member.
 2. Explain to participants that when the Uniform Interstate Family Support Act (UIFSA) requires “residence,” it is referring to physical residence, not domicile. The Official Comment to Section 205 expressly states that “residence is a fact question for the trial court, keeping in mind that the question is residence, not domicile.” However, there is UIFSA case law in some states that equates a military member’s residence with where a military person claims legal domicile.
 3. Explain to participants that UIFSA’s long arm provisions for establishment and enforcement of support apply to military members just as they do to civilians.

What you need to know

1. Section 201 of UIFSA, which is the long arm provision for establishment of a support obligation against a nonresident, includes as bases of jurisdiction that:
 - the individual resided with the child in the forum state (the state conducting the proceeding)
 - the individual resided in the forum state and provided prenatal expenses or support for the child
 - the child resides in the forum state as a result of the acts or directives of the individual.
2. Section 205 of UIFSA (as amended in 2008) defines continuing, exclusive jurisdiction to modify a child support order:
 - (a) A tribunal of this state that has issued a child-support order consistent with the law of this state has and shall exercise continuing, exclusive jurisdiction to modify its child-support order if the order is the controlling order and:
 - (1) at the time of the filing of a request for modification this state is the residence of the obligor, the individual obligee, or the child for whose benefit the support order is issued; or
 - (2) even if this state is not the residence of the obligor, the individual obligee, or the child for whose benefit the support order is issued, the parties consent in a record or in open court that the tribunal of this state may continue to exercise jurisdiction to modify its order.
 - (b) A tribunal of this state that has issued a child-support order consistent with the law of this state may not exercise continuing, exclusive jurisdiction to modify the order if:
 - (1) all of the parties who are individuals file consent in a record with the tribunal of this state that a tribunal of another state that has jurisdiction over at least one of the parties who is an individual or that is located in the state of residence of the child may modify the order and assume continuing, exclusive jurisdiction; or
 - (2) its order is not the controlling order.

3.2.2.2 Physical Residence

Jurisdiction based on physical residence is especially important in an interstate case. Every state has enacted the Uniform Interstate Family Support Act (UIFSA). In both the long arm provision of UIFSA, discussed below, as well as its definition of “continuing, exclusive jurisdiction,” the Act refers to “residence.” A tribunal may decide that a military member has two residences: his or her state of legal domicile and the state where he or she is physically stationed. According to the reporter to the Act, the tribunal that is able to most accurately determine the ability of the noncustodial parent to pay support (and therefore should hear the case) is in the state of the parent’s current physical residence. Case law varies.

3.2.2.3 Long Arm Jurisdiction

State long arm jurisdiction statutes provide a means for a court or an administrative tribunal to exercise personal jurisdiction over a military member who is not a resident in the state. The Uniform Interstate Family Support Act (UIFSA) contains a very expansive long arm statute for use in the establishment and enforcement of support obligations. It can be the basis for obtaining personal jurisdiction over a nonresident military member, just as it can over a nonresident civilian.

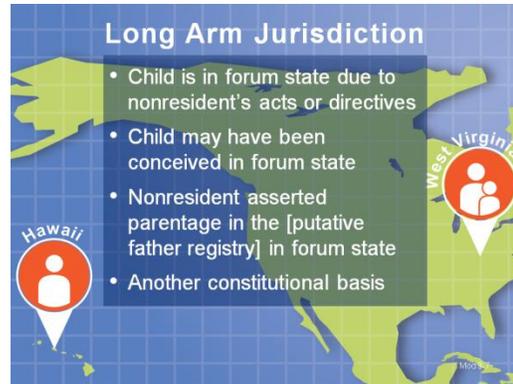

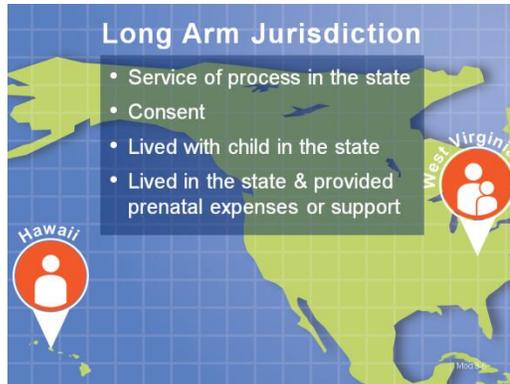

TRAINING NOTES

What you need to say/do

1. Display PowerPoint Slide 3-5: Long Arm Jurisdiction as you discuss the first four bullets.
2. Note that in military cases, a person may reside in more than one state, for example., the service member may maintain a military residence in State A but has been physically stationed in State B for several years. Courts may differ in determining where a parent must seek modification in that situation.
3. Define service of process for participants.
4. With regard to “personal service within the forum state,” provide participants with a Practice Tip: Ask the member’s commanding officer when the member has scheduled leave. A good time to attempt personal service is during the holidays.
5. Explain to participants that they can serve process on military members in much the same manner as on civilians. However, military members may often be moving targets because of reassignments.
6. Inform the participants that there is no central service of process location or organization for the entire military or for each military department.
7. Display PowerPoint Slide 3-6: Long Arm Jurisdiction (cont’d) as you discuss the next four bullets.

What you need to know

According to UIFSA’s Official Comments to the 2001 UIFSA, the intent of the 2001 changes to Section 205 were not substantive, but rather to clarify the original intent of the Drafting Committee: “. . . [S]ubstitution of the term “is the residence” for the term “remains the residence” makes clear that any interruption of residence of a party between the date of the issuance of the order and the date of filing the request for modification does not affect jurisdiction to modify. Thus, if there is but one order, it is the controlling order in effect and enforceable throughout the United States, notwithstanding the fact that everyone has left the issuing State. If the order is not modified during this time of absence, a return to reside in the issuing State by a party or child will immediately identify the proper forum at the time of filing a proceeding for modification. Although the statute does not speak explicitly to the issue, temporary absence should be treated in a similar fashion. Temporary employment in another State may not forfeit a claim of residence in the issuing State, State ex rel. Havlin v. Jamison, 971 S.W.2d 938 (Mo. App. 1998). Of course, residence is a fact question for the trial court, keeping in mind that the question is residence, not domicile.”

UIFSA authorizes a tribunal to exercise jurisdiction over a nonresident if:

- the individual is personally served with a [citation, summons, notice] within the forum state;
- the individual submits to the jurisdiction of the forum state by consent, by entering a general appearance, or by filing a responsive document having the effect of waiving any contest to personal jurisdiction;
- the individual resided with the child in the forum state;
- the individual resided in the forum state and provided prenatal expenses or support for the child;
- the child resides in the forum state as a result of the acts or directives of the individual;
- the individual engaged in sexual intercourse in the forum state and the child may have been conceived by that act of intercourse;
- the individual asserted parentage of a child in the [putative father registry] maintained in the forum state by the [appropriate agency]; or
- there is any other basis consistent with the constitutions of the forum state and the United States for the exercise of personal jurisdiction.

TRAINING NOTES

What you need to say/do

1. Identify the three methods for service of process that are applicable to both civilians and military members who reside off base.
2. Display PowerPoint Slide 3-7: United States Installations.
3. Explain to the participants that a military installation is very similar to a city, with all of the normal amenities associated with city life.
4. Explain the concept of an "open" versus a "closed" installation and how it affects access to the installation. After 9/11, most installations were closed. Some have since opened. They should check with the installations in their area to determine those facilities' access and visitation policies.

What you need to know

1. Military members are located all over the United States and the world. The transient nature of military service can often make service of process a challenging event. The procedure for service of process on military members is similar to the procedures for civilians, but certain aspects will be different depending on the military member's location.
2. The actual service of process on a military member who resides in the civilian community is the same as that on a civilian. Military status, in and of itself, does not insulate a military member from service of process.

3.2.3 Service of Process

In order to obtain jurisdiction over an individual, due process under the United States Constitution also requires notice of the proceeding. "Service of process" is the delivery of the legal document to that individual, notifying the person of a claim or charge against the person, or informing the individual of specific acts that he or she is required to perform, such as appearing before a tribunal.

Although many military members may live on an installation, the vast majority live in the neighboring communities surrounding the installation. These members can be treated as any other person subject to a state's service of process procedures and jurisdictional requirements. Methods for service of process include mail, voluntary acceptance of service, and personal service by a civilian authority – depending upon the type of action that is being brought. For example, under most state laws, establishment of an initial support obligation requires voluntary acceptance of service or personal service by an authorized official. If a military member resides on a military installation, you can still serve the member with process. However, there are some limitations that will apply.

3.3 UNITED STATES MILITARY INSTALLATIONS

U.S. military installations exist in every state. DoD personnel may live in barracks-type apartment dwellings or in family-style housing in neighborhoods. If you have driven by or through a base, you may have noticed it is often very much like a city, with neighborhoods, commissaries or grocery stores, fast food franchises, gas stations, and shopping centers. The base may be "open" or "closed." Members of the public, without any special permit or status requirements, can usually travel freely through an "open" installation. A "closed" installation has "checkpoints" manned by security personnel and requires that people have special identification or specific need to enter the installation.

TRAINING NOTES

What you need to say/do

1. Continue to display PowerPoint Slide 3-7: United States Installations.
2. Point out that a commander or military official is not responsible for serving process on behalf of the IV-D agency.
3. Explain the different types of federal jurisdiction over military installations and the impact that has on state service of process.

What you need to know

1. In an exclusive federal jurisdiction with no state reservation for service of process, military authorities can merely inform the military member of the request to serve process and seek voluntary acceptance. On installations with concurrent or proprietary jurisdiction, or where service of process has been reserved by the state, a civilian official may serve process on the installation. Virtually no installation is exclusive federal jurisdiction with no state reservation for process.
2. Both the Army and Navy have published rules for service of civil process within the United States. Army regulations are at 32 C.F.R. § 516.10. Regulations governing the Navy and Marine Corps are at 32 C.F.R. § 720.20. Both regulations are discussed in the next set of Training Notes.

3.3.1 Service by Mail

Many enforcement actions do not require personal service. If service by mail is acceptable under the forum state's law, you can send a first class letter, or a certified or registered letter with return receipt requested – depending upon what the law requires – to the obligor's military address. Military facilities and naval craft have post offices so even “return receipt requested” service is available.

3.3.2 Personal Service

If the remedy requires personal service – such as with an establishment or a contempt action – you may have more difficulty obtaining service. Military authorities are not responsible for serving process on members of the armed forces. Sometimes they can facilitate service, as will be discussed later. If the service member must be served formally on military property, federal law and military regulations will determine whether the process server may gain access to the installation.

The nature of federal jurisdiction over military installations in the United States varies. Sometimes federal jurisdiction may be so exclusive that a state process cannot be served on the installation. In such cases, military commanders will determine where the member will accept service. If the member refuses to do so, the commander may deny the process server access to the installation. See 32 C.F.R. § 516.10(d)(1)(Army) and 32 C.F.R. § 720.20(a)(1)(Navy).

In most cases, however, states reserve the right to serve civil and criminal process. This is true on military installations where there is concurrent, or partial, federal legislative jurisdiction. It is also true on military installations where the federal government just has a proprietary interest in the land or buildings.

TRAINING NOTES

What you need to say/do

1. Continue to display PowerPoint Slide 3-7: United States Installations.
2. If state service of process is permitted on a military installation, the service of process is usually centralized to prevent civilian law enforcement or process servers from disrupting military activities.
3. Display PowerPoint Slide 3-8: Voluntary Acceptance of Service.
4. Explain the Army regulations governing service of process.

What you need to know

1. The installation's legal office can provide information regarding how process is served on a particular installation. Where state service of process is permitted, usually either the Provost Marshall or the installation's law enforcement section will assist with service.
2. Army regulations are at 32 C.F.R. § 516.10. They provide that on federal property where the right to serve process is 1) reserved by or granted to the state, 2) in areas of concurrent jurisdiction or 3) where the United States has only a proprietary interest, Army officials will first determine if the individual wishes to accept service voluntarily. If the member declines to accept service, the requesting party will be allowed to serve the process in accordance with applicable state law, subject to reasonable restrictions imposed by the installation commander.
3. Army Regulation 27-40, Litigation (1994), sets forth the policy of the Army on service of process. It is consistent with the federal regulation at 32 C.F.R. § 516.10.
4. Regulations governing the Navy and Marines are at 32 C.F.R. § 720.20. In order to protect against interference with mission accomplishment and to preserve good order, service cannot be made without the commander's consent. Where practical, the commanding officer of a naval installation will require that the process be served in his presence or in the presence of a designated officer. The regulations distinguish a request to serve process aboard an installation that is made by a process server from a state court in the jurisdiction where the naval station is located from a request that is made by an out-of-state process server. In the former case, regulations provide that the command ordinarily should not prevent service of process so long as delivery is made in accordance with reasonable command regulations. If service is permitted, the commander should designate an appropriate location where the process server and the member can meet privately. Where the process is to be served by someone from an out-of-state jurisdiction, the named military member is not required to accept service. Therefore, the process server and the member need not meet face-to-face. Rather, the process server should report to the designated command location while the member named is contacted and advised that he may accept or refuse service.
5. Explain the Navy/Marine Corps regulations governing service of process.

If the military installation is under concurrent or proprietary jurisdiction, the state has the right to serve process on the installation according to state laws. A sheriff or other proper civilian official may therefore enter the installation, contact the local military police, identify the person to be served, and attempt service. The installation's central point of contact for service of process will facilitate service using the procedure put in place by the installation or garrison commander.

The best way to determine an installation's type of jurisdiction is to call the installation legal office. The installation legal office can also inform you of the policies and regulations governing service of process on the installation. Service of process on an installation is often centralized in order to control and monitor the presence of civilian law enforcement or other civilian authorities, as well as to provide for an orderly procedure that will have the least impact on the installation and its mission. The installation provost marshal or law enforcement section is the usual conduit.

On installations where the state has reserved the right to serve civil process, Army regulations require that commanders first determine where the member wishes to accept service. If the member declines, "the requesting party [is] allowed to serve the process in accordance with applicable state law, subject to reasonable restrictions imposed by the commander."

In order to protect against interference with mission accomplishment and to preserve good order, Navy and Marine Corps regulations provide that service cannot be made without the commander's consent. Where practical, the commanding officer of a naval installation will require that the process be served in his or her presence or in the presence of a designated officer. If the process server is from a state court in the jurisdiction where the naval station is located, regulations provide that the command ordinarily should not prevent service of

1. Continue to display PowerPoint Slide 3-8: Voluntary Acceptance of Service.
 2. Point out the different procedures for when the process server is from a state in the jurisdiction where the installation or naval station is located as compared to when the process server is from a jurisdiction other than where the command is located.
 3. Explain the role of the military legal assistance office with respect to advising military members faced with child support and service of process issues.

What you need to know

process so long as delivery is made in accordance with reasonable command regulations. Commanders may designate an appropriate location where the process server and the member can meet privately, and may order the member to that location.

The procedures are different if the military installation and the court that issues the process are located in different states. In such cases, military policy does not require the member to accept service. If the service member refuses to accept service, military authorities may notify the process server of the refusal and deny access to the installation.

If you experience problems with service of process on a military installation, your first call should be to the legal assistance office for the installation involved. Establishing and maintaining a good relationship with the installation legal office will help you greatly in carrying out your duties. Remember, military authorities with questions concerning service of process will ask the installation legal office, or their legal advisor, about what is permissible and what is not. Military members will also often seek legal help from the installation legal assistance office. If a legal assistance attorney contacts you on behalf of a military member about your state's laws regarding service of process or child support, inform him or her of the possible consequences for delays in establishing or enforcing an order, such as an award of retroactive support or the accrual of an arrearage.

Service of process for federal courts has fewer limitations than service of process for state courts. Regardless of whether the installation is under exclusive or concurrent federal jurisdiction, civil officials are permitted to serve federal process. The only restrictions are those reasonable restrictions that the installation or garrison commander imposes.

For additional assistance with service of process, see the contacts listed in Handout 3-1 in the Appendix.

TRAINING NOTES

What you need to say/do

1. Display PowerPoint Slide 3-9: Overseas Methods of Service.
2. Explain to the participants that they can serve process on military members overseas in the same manner as on military members in the United States.
3. Provide the participants with the following Practice Tip: If you have tried service by certified mail, return receipt requested, and it has been unsuccessful because the military member refused to accept service, try this next step: Enclose a second set of documents in an envelope to the military postal officer of the APO or FPO where the military member is located, seeking assistance with delivery.
4. The benefit of “certified mail, return receipt requested,” is that the status of the letter can be tracked through the United States Postal Service website.

What you need to know

1. Service members in the Army or Air Force have Army or Air Force Post Office (APO) addresses. Members of the Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard have Fleet Post Office (FPO) addresses.
2. The date that a service member is eligible for return from an overseas assignment is known as the DEROS (Date Eligible for Return from Overseas). This date can be found in personnel documents and may be useful in determining whether attempts at overseas service are viable or whether it is better to wait until the service member returns to the United States.
3. The Hague Convention on Service Abroad, discussed in a later section, permits a Contracting State to object to service by “postal channels,” and a number of countries have done so. Service by mail in those countries would be improper. See the Hague Service Convention, Articles 10 and 21, accessible at www.hcch.net.

3.4 OVERSEAS INSTALLATIONS AND LOCATIONS

Serving process on military members stationed at overseas locations or on a ship can be a bit more difficult compared to service at United States locations. It is important to remember, though, that the same general rules concerning service of process apply.

3.4.1 Service by Mail

Just as with United States installations, service of process by mail, if permitted by both your state and the jurisdiction where the military member is located, is an easy and efficient method of service. Military postal clerks follow the same guidelines as the United States Postal Service. Although the address may be an Army or Air Force Post Office (APO) or Fleet Post Office (FPO), it is still U.S. mail, and again, certified mail and “return receipt requested” services are available. Some countries where military members are deployed do not permit service of process by mail. You should check the State Department’s website to determine whether service by mail is permitted in the country where you intend to serve the military member. See http://travel.state.gov/law/judicial/judicial_680.html.

If you attempt service by mail but do not receive a return receipt, prepare a second set of documents and place them in an envelope addressed to the military member, with the return receipt affixed and postage paid. Place this envelope into a larger one and address the outside envelope to the military postal officer for the APO or FPO where the military member is located.

TRAINING NOTES

What you need to say/do

1. Continue to display PowerPoint Slide 3-9: Overseas Methods of Service.
 2. Identify four alternatives to service by mail on a military member stationed overseas.
 3. Refer participants to Handout 3-2: Information on Service of Legal Documents Abroad. Discuss the concept of a central authority under the Hague Service Convention and what role it plays in service of process overseas. Note that the United States is a party to the Hague Service Convention.

What you need to know

1. Service of process overseas may be accomplished through a variety of methods, each with their strengths and limitations. The laws of the host nation -- in addition to any conventions, treaties, or Status of Forces agreements -- may affect the method and manner in which process may be served.
2. The best source of information on service of process in overseas locations is the United States Department of State website at www.state.gov.

Include a memo to the postal official that details your previous efforts to obtain a return receipt. In compliance with military policy, ask that the Military Post Office (MPO) personnel obtain the member's signature prior to delivering the envelope to the member and send the return receipt back to you. If the member refuses to accept the certified or registered mail, ask that the MPO personnel endorse the document "refused" and return it to you. As long as you have the receipt or label number for the certified mail you sent, you can go to the United States Postal Service website at www.usps.com to track the status of the package (or envelope).

3.4.2 Alternative Methods of Service Abroad

If service of process by mail is not permitted, a variety of alternative methods may be available depending on the specific state and foreign law involved, including:

- service by a foreign authority pursuant to a treaty or convention;
- personal service by a foreign agent (foreign attorney or process server);
- voluntary acceptance of service; or
- service by letters rogatory to a foreign authority.

Each method has its strengths and limitations, and each foreign country has its own rules on which of these methods, if any, are available. See Handout 3-2 in the Appendix. For detailed information on service of process in overseas locations, see the Department of State website at www.state.gov.

3.4.2.1 The Hague Convention on Service Abroad

The 1965 Hague Convention on Service Abroad of Judicial and Extrajudicial Documents in Civil or Commercial Matters (Hague Service Convention) streamlines methods of serving documents originating in one country that is a party to the Convention upon persons residing in another country that is also a party to the Convention. The United States is a party to this Convention. You

TRAINING NOTES

What you need to say/do

1. Continue to display PowerPoint Slide 3-9: Overseas Methods of Service.
2. The request form under the Hague Service Convention merely states the name and address of the person to be served and the desired method of service.
3. The Convention spells out three alternative methods of service:
 - service according to the local law of the foreign jurisdiction to which the request was sent;
 - service by a particular method specified in the request; or
 - service by delivery to the addressee if he or she agrees to voluntarily accept it.
4. Walk the participants through serving process under the Hague Service Convention.

What you need to know

1. A child support worker should closely heed the following caveats in all cases where service is attempted through the Hague Service Convention:
 - Read and follow the Convention to the letter;
 - Carefully check the “Declarations” of the country in which he or she is seeking service (e.g., some countries object to certain forms of service);
 - Always provide a translation of the documents to be served even if the recipient country does not require it;
 - Be certain that he or she has selected a form of service that will satisfy state law for the type of action that is being brought in the United States;
 - Include a warning and detailed summary putting the military member to be served on notice of the legal effect of the service; and
 - Allow sufficient time for the recipient member to meet any deadline for response or to retain legal representation.
2. Effective January 30, 2003, the U.S. Department of Justice has delegated the service of process function performed by the Central Authority to a company called “Process Forwarding International” (PFI). PFI has a contract to manage all formal requests for service of process inside the U.S. on judicial documents under the following treaties and conventions:
 - The Hague Service Convention (incoming documents)
 - Inter-American Convention on Letters Rogatory and Additional Protocol (incoming and outgoing documents)

The contract includes the completion and return of process service within six weeks of receipt by PFI, Internet tools to track the service on-line, fee-based language translation, photo copying, and locate services. See www.hagueservice.net.

can find complete details on the contracting countries to this Convention, as well as the methods of service available in each of those countries, on the Hague Conference website at www.hcch.net.

Service of process under the Hague Service Convention is relatively easy and less expensive than other methods of service abroad. You send your request for service of process to a country's designated Central Authority, which is usually the Ministry of Justice. The names and addresses of the Central Authorities for all member countries are listed in the Convention. The request for service is sent using a Request for Service Form, which you can fill out online at http://www.hcch.net/index_en.php?act=text.display&tid=47#pdf.

The completed form and underlying documents to be served, with accompanying translations, if applicable, should be mailed by "any competent authority or judicial officer" directly to the foreign Central Authority. The court or the agency/attorney representing the plaintiff should execute the portion of the form marked "identity and address of the applicant," and the "name and address of the requesting authority." Reference to the authority for the request must be included in the request. State that the request is made pursuant to Rule 4(c)2(A), United States Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, and any other pertinent federal or state law.

Unless requested otherwise, the Central Authority itself or its designee will serve process according to its country's laws governing the service of process upon persons within the country's jurisdiction. If personal service is required, the form must so note. Generally, there are no fees for service of process through the Central Authority. A Central Authority may bill costs of personal service in a remote location. On the reverse side of the Request for Service form, there is a Certificate of Service form that the Central Authority will return to the requesting party once service is completed.

TRAINING NOTES

What you need to say/do

1. Continue to display PowerPoint Slide 3-9: Overseas Methods of Service.
 2. Explain the reciprocity agreements that exist between states and a number of countries with respect to enforcement of child support and service of process.

What you need to know

1. A status of forces agreement (SOFA) is an agreement between a host country and a foreign nation stationing forces in that country. The SOFA attempts to clarify how the foreign military is allowed to operate in the host country. It addresses a number of matters, including legal issues such as civil and criminal jurisdiction over the military bases. Some SOFAs address matters concerning service of process on military members located in the country. How detailed the SOFA is depends in large part upon how long-term the military presence in the host country is expected to be. Each SOFA is negotiated separately with the host country, although the United States has a multilateral SOFA with NATO members. The United States currently has more than 90 SOFAs.
2. Section 459 of the Social Security Act authorizes the Department of State and the Department of Health and Human Services to enter into agreements with foreign countries for child support enforcement. As of February 2013, the United States has federal reciprocal arrangements in force with Australia; all the Canadian Provinces and Territories except Quebec; the Czech Republic; El Salvador; Finland; Hungary; Ireland; Israel; the Netherlands; Norway; Poland; Portugal; the Slovak Republic; Switzerland; and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland. For more information, see <http://www.acf.hhs.gov/programs/css/international>.
3. The United States also participated in negotiation of the Hague Convention on the International Recovery of Child Support and Other Forms of Family Maintenance. As of February 2013, this 2007 Convention has been ratified by Norway, Albania, and Bosnia & Herzegovina. Its ratification by the United States and other countries is pending. See http://www.hcch.net/index_en.php?act=conventions.status&cid=131.
4. Pursuant to UIFSA, states may also enter into reciprocal agreements with foreign countries. Currently, there are reciprocal agreements between a number of states and Australia, Austria, Bermuda, some Canadian provinces, the Czech Republic, England, Fiji, Finland, France, Germany, Hungary, Ireland, Jamaica, Mexico, New Zealand, Northern Ireland, Norway, Poland, Scotland, the Slovak Republic, South Africa, and Wales.

It is important to remember that a Central Authority may not always serve process on members of the U.S. military. Issues that may prevent service include Status of Forces Agreements (SOFA) and other bilateral agreements between a foreign nation and our military forces.

During the 1970's, countries that were members of the Organization of American States (OAS) entered into a pair of international agreements collectively called the Inter-American Convention on Letters Rogatory and Additional Protocol. Similar to the Hague Service Convention, these are in force with 17 Central and South American countries. The United States has ratified it, noting a reservation only to Article 2b that pertains to evidence. The process for service is similar to the Hague Service Convention, with slight changes made in the forms used, and the requirements for certifications by a clerk of court. The private person who wants to serve documents in a foreign country pursuant to the Additional Protocol to the Inter-American Convention on Letters Rogatory, must complete the on-line form, USM-272, Request for Service Abroad of Judicial or Extrajudicial Documents Pursuant to the Additional Protocol to the Inter-American Convention on Letters Rogatory. The Spanish version is USM-272, En Español.

3.4.2.2 Personal Service by a Foreign Agent

This method of service is usually expensive. It is imperative that you verify with the State Department's Office of Citizens Consular Affairs or an attorney in the foreign country that you are complying with the country's current law.

You may be able to seek assistance with personal service if the State Department and the Department of Health and Human Services have declared the country to be a foreign reciprocating country or political subdivision of a country (see <http://www.acf.hhs.gov/programs/css/international>), or if your state, as the initiating state, has a reciprocal support agreement with that country. In most states, the Attorney General's Office is the place to contact to determine with which countries the state has an agreement.

TRAINING NOTES

What you need to say/do

1. Continue to display PowerPoint Slide 3-9: Overseas Methods of Service.
 2. Discuss voluntary acceptance of service.
 3. Explain the "letters rogatory" process, emphasizing that it is time-consuming and often inefficient.
 4. Discuss how combat may affect the ability of a IV-D office to serve process.

What you need to know

According to the State Department,
http://travel.state.gov/law/judicial/judicial_683.html#summary:

Letters rogatory are the customary method of obtaining judicial assistance from abroad in the absence of a treaty or executive agreement. Letters rogatory are requests from courts in one country to the judiciary of a foreign country requesting the performance of an act, which, if done without the sanction of the foreign court, could constitute a violation of that country's sovereignty. Letters rogatory may be used in countries where multi-lateral or bilateral treaties on judicial assistance are not in force to effect service of process or to obtain evidence if permitted by the laws of the foreign country. 22 C.F.R. 92.54 provides a definition of letters rogatory.

3.4.2.3 Voluntary Acceptance of Service

If state law requires personal service, the caseworker can attempt to contact the military member or the commanding officer and request the voluntary acceptance of service. This is often a useful first step. The consequences of failing to abide by a support order, which could lead to an order to show cause for contempt, can have much greater consequences to a military member stationed overseas. That is especially true if the military member is required to return to the United States in order to attend civil proceedings.

3.4.2.4 Letters Rogatory

Letters Rogatory are requests from a court in the United States to a court in a foreign country seeking assistance in obtaining evidence (covered in Module 5), or in effecting service of process. Letters rogatory are particularly used in countries where no other method of service is available. Preparing letters rogatory can be a time consuming, complicated, and frustrating process. Unless no alternative exists, letters rogatory should be your last resort.

3.4.3 Combat Situations

Problems that arise in attempting to serve process on military members can be compounded when the military member is involved in a contingency or combat operation. Military members may be away from their normal stateside or overseas installation for months, and even years, when they're involved in any manner of deployment. These temporary duty locations may not be able to be disclosed or may constantly change within a particular operation. Under such a circumstance, you may be better off seeking to have the military enforce its own support requirements, without a court order, as an interim measure.

TRAINING NOTES

What you need to say/do

1. Display PowerPoint Slide 3-10: Service on Board a Ship. Explain how a service member stationed on a ship can be served by mail.
 2. Explain procedures for obtaining personal service on a military member located on a ship.

What you need to know

32 C.F.R. § 720.20 states that if service of process is attempted from out-of-state by mail and refused by the member, the refusal should be noted and the documents returned to the sender. Questions should be referred to the staff judge advocate, command counsel, or the local naval legal service office.

3.4.4 Service on Board a Ship

For military members that are aboard a ship outside U.S. waters, the best method for service of process is through the mail, if your particular state's law permits this method. Even military members on a ship will have an APO (Army or Air Force Post Office) or FPO (Fleet Post Office) address in the United States. If necessary, follow the procedures noted earlier to seek assistance in obtaining a return receipt. Explain to the officer-in-charge of the service member's military post office that you never received a return receipt when you mailed the first notice, so you request that proper mailing procedures be followed this time and that you receive a receipt upon the delivery of the enclosed letter to the service member. Naval regulations provide that if the member refuses service by mail, the refusal will be noted and the documents returned to the sender.

If personal service is required by state law, you can attempt voluntary acceptance of service by the military member. Again, it may be useful to send the member's commanding officer a letter requesting the commander's assistance in service of process. The commander cannot serve the member with process. However, you can ask the commander to explain the consequences if the service member fails to respond to a child support action.

It is more difficult to personally serve the military member when the ship is in port. In times of military alert, information about where a ship will dock during voyage is information that the military is unlikely to disclose. It may be necessary to delay service of process until the ship returns to its "home" port, whether that location is stateside or overseas.

TRAINING NOTES

What you need to say/do

1. After discussing diligent efforts to serve process, display PowerPoint Slide 3-11: Exercise Scenarios.
 2. Pass out Handout 3-3: Review Exercises. Have the participants count off into groups of four. Ask them to read and discuss the exercise scenarios within their groups. Each group should identify a recorder who will note the issues related to service of process and the group's proposed answers. Inform participants that they will have 15 minutes to complete the two exercises.
 3. At the end of 15 minutes, facilitate a class discussion of the questions at the end of each exercise scenario and the groups' proposed answers. Ensure that each group has a chance to respond to a question.
 4. Ask participants if they have any questions related to the material presented.

What you need to know

1. The federal requirements for attempting re-service are similar to the requirements for repeating unsuccessful locate activities.
2. The answers to the exercise scenarios are in the Appendix.
3. Once the participants have come back together, allow 15 minutes to discuss their proposed answers to the scenario questions.

3.5 DILIGENT EFFORTS TO SERVE PROCESS

Federal regulations governing locate responsibilities of state IV-D agencies require that the states create guidelines defining “diligent efforts to serve process.” Specifically, when prior efforts to serve process are unsuccessful but adequate information exists in the case to justify additional attempts to serve process, the guidelines must provide for a periodic repetition of efforts to serve process.

3.6 EXERCISES

Handout 3-3 presents scenarios that involve service of process on military members in the United States and at overseas locations. After dividing into groups, designate a recorder. Within your group, identify the issues related to service of process and answer the questions posed at the end of each scenario. At the end of the specified time period, everyone will reconvene to engage in a class discussion of the groups’ proposed responses.

What you need to know

3.7 SUMMARY OF MODULE

In this module, we discussed:

- personal jurisdiction and in rem jurisdiction,
- personal jurisdiction based on domicile, physical presence, and long arm statutes,
- the difference between military installations with exclusive federal jurisdiction and with concurrent or proprietorial jurisdiction,
- service of process on U.S. installations,
- service of process on overseas installations, and
- service of process on board a ship.

3.8 PREVIEW OF MODULE 4

In the next module, we will discuss the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act, including:

- its purpose,
- its applicability to entry of a default judgment in a paternity or child support proceeding, and
- the circumstances that require appointment of counsel for the absent military member.
